With Love and Prayer

Dearest family,
I am greeting you in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost and may the peace and love of Lent rest on all of us. Lent has always been a remarkable and warm season in our beloved country and also to Christians but this year has been an exception because of the natural warfare that my country is fighting (the Ebola) but again though the virus is still in my country but yet not as high as before and when worse is better the results revolves around 5 to 10 each day. You know its a hard time for savior of the world and the country as a whole but all we have to say is thank you Lord for seeing us through. I will want to take this opportunity to thank all of you for supporting us to attend the Ebola seminar in Nigeria its was a lot more educative and with such understanding Saviour of the World will be able to educate each and every child about the do's and don't's of Ebola and also emphasizing that abstinence is the best policy. We will also be able to know the symptoms of Ebola by just looking at the sick person and not by touching him. They gave us a thermometer to be checking our temperature each day just to keep out selves safe and also so for us to keep knowing our status and in the case of any change of status we most report to the hospital for medical advice and i most say we feel so lucky to be part of that seminar We all want also to extend out profound gratitude and thanks for the truck you bought us. We appreciate it a thousand times and this is just another means for us to fight the virus and to keep our children healthy and we pray that it arrives quick and safe.

Schools are going to reopen on march 30 now all preparations are putting things in place for the reopening of schools we strongly need your prayers.

The farm also is doing well as the other group of bird start dropping eggs yesterday but because of the huge cost attached to schooling we are using the eggs to feed the birds and also to pay fees and other school items and necessities. So far we are not doing any savings from the farm. We have Francis Conteh who is now in University we are kindly asking for his support as we are not strong now to carry university expenses. We love you very much and you are always in our love and prayers

Children*

NOW YOU'VE DONE IT

Here is the car you bought for Louisa and the children!

It is a 2009 Toyota Highlander, with 75,000 miles. The cost was $15,200. It is now on a ship going to Africa. Louisa should receive it at the end of May.

Staying Awake

To all my dear brothers and sisters in the Savior of the World Family,

We are very close to the yearly celebration of the Paschal

Mystery, the thoughtful re-living of Jesus' choice to save the world by his Passion, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into heaven. I pray that this holy time of the year be a source of personal newness – a new faith that is more alive, a hope that is more alert to God's promises, and a new love that is ready to reach out to people whom we perhaps have placed well outside our field of vision. May this be a time when we open our eyes, minds and hearts to God's activity in the depths of our souls – he is the God who never sleeps.

But when Jesus was choosing to be Savior of the World, when he was telling his Father that at the age of 33 he was ready to accept insult, humiliation, rejection, excruciating hunger and thirst, the sharp, ripping pains of the scourging and the crowning, the smashed nerves that come with the nailing to the cross, a very lonely death... - when Jesus said, "Yes," to all this in the Garden of Gethsemane, the apostles were sleeping. Are we sleeping when Jesus suffers?

Among the poorest of the poor are the children of Sierra Leone to whom you give special loving attention. These are children who have known moments in the past when they thought they would not make it, in danger of impending death, because they were ignored, left outside, scorned, abandoned – the frightening lack of love, the indifference and neglect that children do not deserve. Then they found Louisa, Kadiatu, Savior of the World – they found you!

Now to share a true moment of my life: when I think of the Passion of Jesus, of

It can be discouraging to think that one small item – made the difference between a mother's joy and a mother's Passion.

Staying Awake

those who do not stay awake with him in his moments of feeling left outside, scorned and abandoned – of those who continue to seek a moment of self-gratification, a moment of self-satisfaction, giving in to personal cravings without a thought about the needs of any other human being – when I think of those who sleep in their own small world of self-interest, my eyes shift direction. Now I am looking at another population of poorest of the poor, those of Albania. Indeed since I have lived in both countries, Sierra Leone and Albania, I must say truthfully that Albania is poorer.

Another eye-catching fact when one makes a comparison between the two countries is that Albanians are extremely hardworking, eat one meal per day, usually at 9 pm at night; and they are working the soil of a very rocky and treacherous terrain in the Balkan Mountains.

Now my contemplation on Jesus in his Passion becomes quite more specific: I am in the house of an Albanian family that has invited me for a feast. As usual, it is the one time of the year when families have united together to kill a goat in order to make it a really hearty celebration. I know the family: I have baptized and confirmed most of them and have given them their First Communion. But I see that one twenty-five-year-old woman is especially quiet and reserved. She is very extraordinary in her silence: it is not at all like an Albanian woman to be like that.

So I ask her sister in a moment of privacy: “What has happened?”

And her sister tells me in a low, subdued voice – she speaks forthrightly but a painful emotion is also struggling to hide right below the surface of her words: “Father, we were all sleeping. We tried our level best to gather all the wood available – it wasn’t much – and then light the wood in such a way that the fire could keep us warm as long as possible during the night. But the wood wasn’t enough. My sister was holding her two-month old baby very tightly against her breasts to give the baby warmth. But in the morning when my sister woke up, the baby in her arms remained still. The baby had died from the cold.”

It can be discouraging to think that one small item – the wood for the fire – made the difference between a mother’s joy and a mother’s Passion. Even the small but generous gesture of love you extend to a child today – for the child’s material welfare or the child’s spiritual welfare – can help that child to live through her passion and enter into the joy of the resurrection.

I am exhorting you to recognize the Savior’s joy: it is a joy, my brothers and sisters, that is meant to be shared. I am speaking of the joy that is the graced consequence of our day-to-day sacrifices in this world, of our own personal passions. But I am also speaking of the joy that seals our eternal destiny in the solidarity of the one Family of God forever in heaven. May God bless you all with the Easter he has planned eternally to give you!
